HARRISBURG, May 28.—The Democratic State Convention met here at 10,80 o'clock to-day, and W. U. Hensel, of Lancaster, without opposition, was made temporary Chairman. He made a very able speech saying that this day marks a new birth in the party in Pennsylvania. His references to saying that this day marks a new birth in the party in Pennsylvania. His references to tariff reform and to President Cleveland and his administration, and reference to the late Samuel J. Tilden, were received with hearty outbursts of applause.

The convention promises to be a thoroughly harmonious one. There will be no opposition to Congressman Scott, ex. Congressman Mutchler, ex. Attorney-General Cassidy and Chas. E. Boyle. The platform will be adopted late this afternoon, and the following plank is embodied in it:

"That revision of the tariff laws is necessary, with a view to their simplification, the correction of their incongruities and inequalities. The regulation of duties in such manner as will put industry on a firm and permanent basis, by covering the difference between wages in this country and in foreign countries. The abolition of taxes on raw materials for manufacturers, and the relief the controlling the prices of the prompt adoption of the revenue bill reported from the Committee on Ways and Means, and urge the Democratic Representatives in Congress from this State to give it their earnest and tindivided support." The remainder of the platform treats of public lands for actual settlement by citizens of the United States, and will also set forth that the surplus in the Treasury should be applied to the public debt; that the Democratic party favor just and liberal pensions and so on.

One of the resolutions instructs the delegation to vote for the renomination of President Cleveland. gation to vote for the renomination of President Cleveland.

When Registrar Michael F. Rickard took hold of the rubber speaking-tube to bring the doctor down, the woman sent forth a picroing shrick and crouched in a corner of the room, crying pitifully: "Don't kill me,"

Dr. Stuart Douglas found that the woman was about to become a mother and she was sent to the medical ward, but in a short time she became so violent that she had to be remeved to the insane pavilion. She is thought to be a Swede, but though spoken to in the Swedish, French, Russian, English and German languages she will give no information about herself.

The woman was taken to the hospital by Mrs. Lizzie Werner, a midwife, of 288 East Nineteenth street. The latter says the woman was brought to her house yesterday morning by a man with a black mustache and beard, whose name is Jansen or Johnson, and who, she thinks, is a mate on a vesself ying in a Brooklyn dock.

He said the woman was his wife and he wanted her taken care of till her baby was born. Mrs. Werner said she would charge $20 for her services and the man paid her $10, saying he would return to-day with the rest. Mrs. Werner had seen the man before. In March last year he made a similar arrangement in regard to another woman whom he said he would send there, but she never came.

The woman was very quiet while she was with the black-bearded man, but as soon as he left she ran wildly about the room, wringing her hands and shrisking with terror.

Mrs. Werner has a certificate from the Columbia School of Midwifery.

ACTOR O'CONNOR MUST PAY

JUSTICE CLANCY DECIDES AGAINST HIM THIS MORNING.

Revelations Made in Court—An Actor Who Played Half a Dozon Parts and Made the Contumes as Well-O'Conner's Acting as a Tragedian and as a Lawyer on Par-Mrs. O'Conner Testifics.

That James Owen O'Connor has acknowledged himself a crushed tragedian and forsworn the footlights and the reception of cabbages and back-number eggs over them, was evidenced by his appearance in Justice Clancy's Second District Civil Court this morning to defend the action brought by his company for unpaid salaries.

He did not stalk in a lordly fashion, but came in quietly, with his wife on his arm, and sat down with her at the table reserved for counsel, until the great mass of business on the calendar was disposed of. A stubbed growth of black beard had been blocked out for counsel, until the great mass of business on the calendar was disposed of. A stubbed growth of black beard had been blocked out on the tragedian's cheeks and upper lip.

He had from a bad actor become, if possible, a worse lawyer, as he proved very quickly when the case of Griffin against O'Connor was called.

Lawyer Sullivan amended his complaint, alleging a breach of contract, instead of claiming for work, labor and services rendered, whereupon Mr. O'Connor arose and said that, while he had the greatest respect for Justice Clancy and his court, he thought the case of sufficient importance to the tried in a court of record, and he therefore moved that it be sent to the Court of Common Pleas.

As the lawyer-tragedian had not complied with the provisions of the code which requires a bond to be given for such transfer of a case. Justice Clancy promptly denied his motion and ordered the case to trial.

Walter Stevens, one of O'Connor's company, was the first to take the stand and swear that there is due him $37.50 for two weeks' salary and board. He had not performed any services during those two weeks, because the company did not play. He held Shylock to his bond, however, and produced a contract which promised it him.

O'Connor's cross-examination of the witness was rambling and pointless, consisting of speeches to the court and reporters.

He intimated that Stevens was not an actor, whereupon Counsellor Bullivan suggested that he might have become a good one under the tutilage of O'Connor.

Linden Clark claimed $33.50 his due, and told of his being paid by the 'tragedian two weeks' additional salary at the close of last season to show that such contracts were customary.

"Aren't you the fellow who was continually breaking me up on the stage and coming to me in the wings and apologizing for your incompetency?" asked the actor lawyer, and that was the extent of his cross-examination.

"Pardon me if I am a little rusty. I haven't practised in eight years," he remarked to the Court as another of his supporting

Jessie Villars's claim was proven by Stevens and then the tragedian placed his wife, Louise, on the stand.

She claimed that she had been mobbed by the company at the Alman House, and was forced to pay them $300. According to her hus-$17.50 costs.

O'Connor will have to enswer in an action brought by another member of his company, Emma Young Crosbie, before Justice Dean, on the 26th.

The case of Musician Mollenhauer was reported on favorably and, after a discussion, Mr. Mollenhauer was reinstated in Progressive Musical Union No. 1.

It was decided that Section No. 2 produce proofs to sustain its complaint against the Jewish Chorus Union.

A report was made that sixty members of the Excelsior Labor Club had lost their situations in Duke & Bons' cigarette manufactory because of the introduction of machinery, and that they are now employed at starvation wages elsewhers.

The West Side Coal Peddlers' Union was reported as having engaged "scab" musicians for an excursion. The section warned it to patronize union musicians only in future. The union complained that union men patronize non-union coal peddlers.

The case of Henry Mannes, for not closing his store early in the evening, was referred to a special committee.

A resolution was passed asking Gov. Hill not to permit himself to be influenced by politicians in the matter of signing the Ballot-Reform bill, which gives the workingmen protection at the elections. All labor organizations are called upon to take similar action.

All the organizations represented in the section were requested to attend the meeting at Cooper Union Hall to-night, and give the locked-out brewerymen financial and moral support.

Please add these facts to the statement made in THE EVENING WORLD about the made in The Evenine World about the hours of grocery clerks.

Our hours are from 5 o'clock in the morning till 9 at night; on Saturdays from 4.30 o'clock till 1 o'clock on Sunday morning, making twenty and one-half hours on Saturday, and then from 5 till 11 o'clock Sunday. Then we only have to go into the stable and clean the horses and wash the wagons, getting through about 1 o'clock, and then we are done for Sunday, for which we receive from $8 to $20 a month.

Union," writes Mr. Thomas P. Glody. That is a first-class conception with American fidess, but I imagine that Mr. Glody is one of those who thinks that unless the potatoes grow in his own garden they are no good.

Now, that is not American. If a thing is any good we Americans are going to have it, and we don't care where it comes from.

And now, Mr. Glody, I am a member of the Amalgamated Society of Carpenters and Joiners, which has its headquarters in Manchester. England, and New York. Our American District Committee has full power over all trade matters in the United States, and does not require the consent of the Executive Council in Manchester, which you can see by looking at rule 27, clause 4, of our rules.

I do not think that you wish well towards us, and I am sorry for it, for you cannot bury us, and strife will hurt both.

Poorly Paid Gravediggers.

To the Editor of the Evening World : In the matter of "Poorly Paid Graveto say that it is very unjust to compare the wages paid by the Calvary authorities $1.25 per day) with the wages paid by the Greenwood authorities ($1.60 per day). The suthorities of Greenwood Cemetery charge $3 for opening the grave of an adult, whereas the authorities of Calvary charge $7 and do not make a reduction even for the poorest people.

Now, while it would be nothing more than just for these graveopeners to get $2.50 per day, I think that the authorities of Calvary, above all others, should pay their men at least $4 per day. JEANNE GERIERRE.

ELECTING THE BISHOPS.

METHODIST CONFERENCE.

The Rev. Dr. Joyce Chosen a Bishop on th Fifth Bailet This Morning-The Delegates Rebuked for Breaking Into Applause as Though They Were at a Political Con-vention—Fraudalent Votes Cast.

The election of bishops was continued this morning at the General Methodist Conference when the sixth ballot was taken. Bushop Bowman presided and Col. Ray, of Indianapolis, led the service of song and prayer.

The two Bishops that were elected yesterday—the Rev. John H. Vincent, D. D., of Chautanqua fame, and the Rev. James N. Fitzgerald, D. D., of the Newark Conference—received congratulations from their friends this morning.

After the reading of the journal Bishop Bowman announced the result of the fifth ballot. The whole number of votes cast was 449, of which Dr. I. W. Joyce, pastor of St. Paul's Church, Cincinnati, received 326 votes. He was declared elected, as only 300 votes were necessary to a choice.

The sixth ballot was ordered and the vote was cast in less than half an hour. There was no election. There were 437 votes cast—322 were necessary to a choice. J. P. Newman received 252; G. A. Goodeell, 250; E. H. Payne, 145; Earl Cranston, 138.

When Dr. Newman's vote was announced it was greeted with an outburst of applause. Bishop Bowman rebuked both the delegates and the audience. He said that they were not at a political convention, and that even though they were in an Opera-House they were carrying on God's work.

On the seventh ballot there was no election. There were 411 votes cast, of which 294 were necessary to a choice. Drs. Newman and Goodeell each received 253, Dr. Cranston 156, and Dr. Payne 135.

A sensation was occasioned by one of the tellers announcing evidences of repeating. Two votes were found on the seventh ballot that were thrown out. One consisted of a slip of paper nearly torn through the centre into two strips. The names of two candidates were written on each slip in the same handwriting.

The other seemingly fraudulent ballot consisted of two pieces of paper with the corners turned down, so that the two could be cast as one and then become separated in the hat. The two pieces of paper were identical in size. They had the same confidates' names and ware in the same handwriting.

A resolution commending the action of the tellers in throwing out the suspicious ballots was passed. Dr. Edwards tried to explain how the suspicious ballots might have been cast by accident, but the conference w

The Body Clad in Ministerial Robes and Surrounded by Flowers at St. Thomas.

Funeral services were held to-day over the remains of the Rev. Dr. William F. Morgan in St. Thomas's Episcopal Church, Fitth avenue and Fifty-third street, of which for so many years, he was pastor. The body was dressed in full ministerial robes, and the casket was surrounded by beautiful floral offerings.

Bishop Potter conducted the services. The church was filled with mourners. There were more than seventy clergymen present. Among them were Bishops Doane and Cox, the Rev. Drs. Samuel Cooke. John W. Brown, Dr. Morgan's successor; Morgan Dix, Wm. R. Huntington and Henry Drisler, and the Revs. Isaac H. Tuttle and Robert Lowry.

Among the laymen were D. O. Mills, Jacob Halstead, George Kemp, John A. C. Gray, H. F. Fahnstock, Henry Ellis, J. M. Fullerton and E. S. Jaffray.

The remains were taken to Newport for interment at 1 F. M. to-day.

parade, he made the skies dark and forbidding, and the atmosphere cold and damp.

All the public schools in Brooklyn are closed to-day in honor of the celebration, and all the public buildings and many private ones are displaying their flags.

According to the programme, which was arranged some time ago, all the Sunday-schools, with the exception of those in the Prospect Park division, were directed to assemble in the different churches to which they are assigned at 2.30 o'clock this afternoon, when the indoor exercises would be held, after which each division was to parade the streets in the district to which it belongs.

There are ten divisions in all, including the Prospect Park. It is estimated that at least 50,000 children were ready this morning to participate in the walk. These are the Bedford division, Marshal Charles H. Fuller: Ocean Hill division, Marshal Wilton C. Johnson: Tompkins Park division, Marshal Bedied division, Marshal Wiltiam G. Peck; Eastern Division, Marshal Moses G, Young, and the Clinton Avenue Division on the Hill, the Heights Division, Marshal Dwight Studwell, and the New York Avenue Division, Marshal Alfred Tilley, on the Heights, and the Carroll Park Division,

The building was occupied by real estate brokers' offices. Jere, Johnson, Jr., who occupied the ground floor, was the only one to suffer loss by water. All were insured.

Mrs. John Laughran, of New York, and William Moore, of Philadelphia, the people who declared that the detectives had exacted $5 from them for the privilege of running their shows, called on Chief Murphy, at Headquarters, late last night. They were shown into a room in which stood Detectives Clos, Dalton, Pearson, Holtie and Smith.

They identified none of them, and when Clos was pointed out declared that some other person had used his name in blackmalling them. A man named Mulligan, they said, was guilty of the crime charged to McNally. Each made an affidavit stating these facts and clearing the detectives."

Oyer and Terminer this morning.

There was Lawson N. Fuller, whose Cable Railway Company, Fulleraff eays, offered $750,000 for the franchise.

There were also Ira Shafer, of Cleary's counsel; Frank Dupignac, of James A. Richmond's defenders, and ex-Judge William Fullerton, who helped to defend Jacob Sharp. Lawyer Clarence E. Aiken, of Auburn, likewise absorbed points of law. Peter A. Hendrick, one of the three young men to whom Judge Morgan J. O'Brien presented his $20,000 library and his practice when he was elevated to the Supreme Court Bench, was there, with his tail, broad-shouldered brother, Father "Tom" Hendrick, of Union Springs.

Ex. Mayor Franklin Edson, whose opposition to the surrender of Broadway to the railway franchise grabbers was ineffectual, was a spectator, with a grim sort of satisfaction on his pleasant face as he witnessed the discomfure of another of the men who triumphed over him in that long fight. But when the proceedings grew wearisome and the gray ex. Mayor arose to leave the court-room, the ruddy defendant also arose, and the two clasped hands in a friendly shake for an unstant.

Assistant District-Attorney Semple began the proceedings by calling in a loud votes for Thomas B, Brown, But Brown did not answer. Neither did Sharp's son-in-law, John H. Selmes, whose name was next called; nor Harrison D. Kerr, the small, quiet, but good-looking brother of the defendant; nor George Bliss, nor Robinson, Scribner and Bright.

And so the trial halted for half an hour, when Mr. Brown put in an appearance and was projected into the witness' chair.

Mr. Brown was a bookkeeper in 1885, and he testified that in June of that year his employers, Reed & Carmick, borrowed $8,000 from Fullgraff, receiving seven one-thousand dollar bills and two five-hundred-dollar bills—presumably a part of the $6,000 which Fullgraff claims to have received from De Lacey.

Fullgraff claims to have received from De Lacey.

Henry A. Robinson, who was Secretary of the Broadway Railway, was called to identify the book of minutes, of the meetings of that corporation, beginning May 17, 1894.

Mr. Cockran and ex. Judge Davis objected. The former said vehemently:

"We submit that the people should put in the testimony which is to establish the connecting link between the bribery and the defendant. The trouble is that all this testimony is offered now with the supposition that the defendant will be connected with the facts proved at a later stage, when we know from the outline given in Mr. Fitzgerald's opening that this cannot be done. From the statements made by him in his opening we know that the prosecution are laboring under a misapprehension of facts."

Justice Patterson overruled the objection, and then Mr. Semple read a history of the Broadway Surface Railway Company from the records of the meetings of the directors. On June 8, 1884, the records showed the and then Mr. Semple read a history of the Broadway Surface Railway Company from the records of the meetings of the directors. On June 8, 1884, the records showed the Directors voted to issue $500,000 second mortgage bonds. In July an ofter of Jacob Sharp to run the road for the company was accepted. Sharp contracted to build and equip the road to the Battery, and in consideration was to receive all the stock of the road already subscribed for or held by the Directors and all the bonds of the road. He was to pay all the expenses.

Mr. Fitzgerald took turns with Mr. Sample in the reading, but that had no effect on the objections which Mr. Cockran entered at the conclusion of the minutes of each meeting.

The reading was concluded at noon, which was the signal for a bunch of objections and exceptions from Mr. Cockran.

Then Mr. Brown identified the records of the meetings of the Directors of the Broadway and Seventh Avenue Company, and Mr. Semple read for another hour.

As these two questions were all that Mr. Brown was expected to answer he was, very considerately, permitted to go go about his business, At I c'clock a recess was taken.

The balance of the day was occupied by the prosecution in reading titles and sometimes the contents of documents bearing on the case.

Some interest was aroused when Col. Fellows suggested that the decision of the General Term at various times be not read, at their contents were familiar, and added that on one occasion when the General Term decided in favor of building a road in Broadway, a dissenting opinion had been given by one of the judges.

Qol. Fellows cast a side glance at ex_Judge Davis declared that when he dissented he feared that the tracks would obstruct travel in Broadway and the Court milled, whereat Judge Davis declared that when he dissented he feared that the tracks would obstruct travel in Broadway and ruin the handsomest business street in the world.
